

NINE GENERALS IN STALIN PURGE 'REHABILITATED'; ONE STILL ALIVE

Marshal Bluecher Heads List — Distortions in Military History Criticized by Official Soviet Magazine.

By B. J. CUTLER

The New York Herald Tribune-Pop. Dispatch Special Radio.

MOSCOW, April 14—In a wholesale revision of history, the Soviet Union has "rehabilitated" nine distinguished military leaders who were purged as enemies of the people under Stalin.

Marshal Vasili K. Bluecher led the list of restored officers. One of the Red Army's most famous field commanders, Marshal Bluecher disappeared in 1938 during one of the former dictator's purges of the armed forces.

An editorial in the magazine Questions of History praised Bluecher and his comrades in arms and bitterly criticized "distortions and falsifications" that flourished in the writing of history during the Stalin era.

Edition Is Month Late.

The organ of the Institute of History and the most influential publication in its field, the magazine released its March issue yesterday—exactly one month late. This delay was attributed to the delicate task involved in working out the new historical line.

In restoring the name of Bluecher to the pages of Soviet history, the magazine made it possible for the younger Russian generation to learn about a man who joined the Communist party in 1916, fought as a hero in the revolution and civil war, and became a ranking military figure in the Far East.

Under the cover name of "Gen. Galen," he became military adviser to Sun Yat-sen and established the famous Whampoa Military Academy in which Chiang Kai-shek studied among others. Returning to the Soviet Union, he commanded the Far Eastern army, an autonomous force that was built to hold the Japanese in check.

Judge in Treason Trial.

Bluecher was a member of the military tribunal that convicted Marshal Mikhail Tukhachevsky, the Red Army commander, of treason in 1937. Less than a year later he was himself branded an enemy of the people and vanished.

Another member of the Tukhachevsky trial board appeared with Bluecher on the list of posthumous heroes. He was Marshal Alexander I. Yegorov, chief of the general staff before 1938.

Other well-known figures on the list were:

Vladimir A. Antonov-Ovseyenko, member of the "committee of five" that seized power for the Bolsheviks in Petrograd in 1917; Andrei S. Bubnov, another member of the committee; Y. B. Gamarnik, political chief of the Red army who reportedly committed suicide in 1938; S. S. Caminev, chief of chemical defenses; M. S. Kedrov, chief of the defense section of the State Planning Commission; M. L. Rukhimovich, commissar of Defense Industry, and I. S. Unslicht, chief of the Air Force.

One Vindicated Earlier.

The reputation of Gen. Antonov-Ovseyenko was rehabilitated earlier at the Communist party Congress in February. Bubnov, an old Bolshevik, who once served as Commissar of Education, managed to survive his fall in Stalin's grace although imprisoned. He is the only member of the group known to be alive today.

The editorial rebuked the history writers of the Stalin regime for ignoring the activities of the commanders on the lists and those of "many other communists who did a lot for strengthening the Red Army and its successful actions."

Distortion of history became intense in the Soviet Union, the magazine said, after secret police boss Lavrenty P. Beria later executed—used "stretching of the truth and outright falsification" in writing about Stalin's pre-revolutionary role in his native Georgia and in the Trans-Caucasus.

Stalin's own books on history and economics were attacked for serious mistakes, reducing the role of Lenin, and placing the dead hand of dogma on Soviet

Woman Aboard--Mrs. Sullivan--Nautilus Cruise All Fouled Up

Associated Press Wirephoto.
REPRESENTATIVE LEONOR SULLIVAN of St. Louis thanking COMDR. EUGENE WILKINSON, skipper of the atomic submarine Nautilus, after she and other members of the House committee traveled from Key West, Fla., to Miami on the submarine yesterday.

Atomic Submarine Fails to Arrive on Time, Welcoming Committee Late Too—Navy Superstition Recalled.

MIAMI, Fla., April 14 (AP)—There's a tradition in the Navy that a woman aboard ship is bad luck, but the sailors were too gallant today to be quoted on whether they thought having Representative Leonor K. Sullivan, Democrat, from St. Louis, on board the Nautilus was responsible for last night's snafu.

Mrs. Sullivan and 19 other members of the House Merchant and Fisheries Committee (all male) were on board the world's first atomic-powered submarine on the trip from Key West. She was a charming guest, the Navy said.

In the Navy a crew prides itself on arriving at its E.T.A. (estimated time of arrival). Yesterday, the Nautilus' E.T.A. was changed four or five times while it cruised outside Miami harbor, circling a buoy while someone had to decide whether there was enough water at the Florida Power & Light Co. dock to float the 3000-ton submarine. There wasn't.

Then communications fouled up and Key West was consulted about the harbor. Three ships showed up and preceded the Nautilus. Then it was decided to tie up at Pier 3 in Miami, within sight of the downtown area.

Because of the change in plans, Gov. Leroy Collins, Constant Bennett of the movies and a Marine Corps band failed to show up at the right place at the right time for the welcome. Even the line handlers failed to make it in time for the sleep.

Lt. Ken Babb, public information officer, told reporters, television and radio men that no one would be allowed aboard. Regulations, you know, the skipper, Comdr. Eugene Wilkinson, explained he couldn't talk to anyone.

Then the Congressmen's wives arrived—late to greet their husbands who had already gone to their hotel. To console them, the wives took on a guided tour of the Nautilus.

Navy officials tried to explain to about 200 taxpayers who had gathered on the dock to look at the $55,000,000 atomic submarine why they couldn't make the tour, too.

"It's a experience I'll never forget," said Representative Sullivan. "Nor I," said a Navy officer.

Historical research. During this period archives were closed to researchers, the editorial asserted.

Urals Campaign Neglected.

The penchant of crediting Stalin with vast importance in the civil war was also criticized. The magazine held that the importance of the Tsaritsin (Stalinград) campaign, in which he participated, was exaggerated while the most important front—in the Urals—was being neglected by Soviet historians.

Taking up the situation after the revolution, the magazine said Trotsky and his followers were "anti-Leninist" but it was an oversimplification to depict them as "agents of foreign intelligence" as did Stalin's history writers.

Great harm was caused by Stalin's doctrine, handed down at the March 1937 meeting of the Central Committee, that each step forward the class struggle would increase in the Soviet Union, the journal held.

"This conception was brought up at a time when the U.S.S.R. had no longer antagonistic classes and it resulted in groundless repressions that brought a great harm to the Communist party and the Soviet state," the editorial said in referring to the purges that followed.

This created an opportunity for "dishonest careerists" to climb up the Soviet ladder through repressions against persons "devoted to the cause of Socialism" in the party, the government and the armed forces, the magazine charged.

INES TOLD TO GET ON BEAM, TELL TRUTH ON FLYING TIME

WASHINGTON, April 14 (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Board told the airlines yesterday to get on the beam as to flying time and tell the public how long it really takes to get from here to there.

It directed the carriers to adopt schedules reflecting actual departure and arrival times for at least 75 per cent of their scheduled flights.

Many of the lines, the CAB said, publish schedules "which do not accurately reflect their actual times of departure and arrival." The statement went into some detail on the results of over-optimistic scheduling, mentioning missed appointments and connections for travelers, difficulties in expediting mail, and unfair competition for lines that schedule closer to the facts of flight.

Air Base's 250,000th Passenger. McGuire AIR FORCE BASE, N.J., April 14 (UP)—Army Sgt. Robert E. Burton of San Francisco, en route to Germany, received a scroll yesterday as the 250,000th Military Air Transport Service passenger processed at McGuire since April 1, 1955.

PERIL IS GREATER THAN SINCE WAR, STEVENSON SAYS

He Continues Florida Attack on Administration Foreign, Domestic Policies.

TAMPA, Fla., April 14 (AP)—Adlai Stevenson says the United States is entering a period in its foreign affairs which he regards as more perilous than it has faced since the last war.

He told the Tampa Bar Association last night at the end of a day of busy campaigning that this was a period which called for strong leadership in order to preserve United States prestige abroad.

"I say it will take the highest responsibility and political courage to stand firm today, when things look good but are not good," he said. "It will take more than that—it will take the highest integrity at the very center of government."

Assails Administration.

Stevenson slugged away with criticisms of both foreign and domestic policies of the Eisenhower Administration in speeches he mixed with rounds of handshaking and a reception by women supporters.

Twice during his rounds, Stevenson crossed paths with Estes Kefauver, his rival for the Democratic presidential nomination, but only once—on a school ground—did they come face to face. They also attended a political fish fry at the same time last night, but went handshaking in different sections of the crowd.

Lt. Ken Babb, public information officer, told reporters, television and radio men that no one would be allowed aboard. Regulations, you know, the skipper, Comdr. Eugene Wilkinson, explained he couldn't talk to anyone.

Stevenson and Kefauver are racing for Florida's 28 convention votes in the May 29 presidential preference primary.

"The advantage of that (proportional counting of electoral votes) is to make a candidate campaign in all areas," he said. "Now, they concentrate in 10 or 20 so-called typical states."

He said this plan, which has been discussed by Congress, would make a vote in Florida count as much as one in Pennsylvania.

Stevenson planned to wind up his current tour tonight in Pensacola, but his aids said he would return for as long as a 10-day stretch of campaigning immediately before the primary.

In his talk to the bar group, the former Illinois Governor said high government officials, including Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and President Eisenhower, were saying "that all is well and we have little to fear—that indeed we are gaining on the enemy every day, while the rest of the world gags with dismay."

Word from Abroad Different.

He said these statements didn't jibe with reports from abroad.

"From abroad we hear that the Soviets are outstripping us in industrial production, that they are wooing the undeveloped countries with promises on which they can make good, and that their economy is indeed expanding at a more rapid rate than our own," he said.

In another talk last night to the Tampa Pan American Commission, Stevenson said foreign policies of the Eisenhower Administration were leading to "deterioration of our situation aboard" and loss of friendships with some of the Latin American countries.

On the home front, Stevenson said in his bar association speech that the Eisenhower Administration was dedicated to the well-being of special interests.

He added that "we see whether we look an Administration dedicated to well-being of a single economic interest—business and the biggest business at that."

In a bid for Tampa's labor vote, Stevenson said the Eisenhower Administration had favored interests of big business and had done nothing for labor.

He asserted that in the high councils of the Eisenhower Administration at the Cabinet level were "three men from one company alone"—General Motors.

"It is obvious," O'Connor added, "that the Salk vaccine which is used to kill a virus cannot cause anyone to excrete a live one. That's all I have."

MONACO WEDDING GUEST ROBBED OF $60,000 IN GEMS

MONTE CARLO, April 14 (UPI)—Thieves stole jewels worth $50,000 today from the hotel room of Matthew McCloskey, Philadelphia builder and treasurer of the Democratic National Committee.

McCloskey is here for the wedding of Prince Rainier and Grace Kelly. The jewels were stolen from his room in Hotel de Paris.

He said the jewels, belonging to Mrs. McCloskey, were in a jewel case inside a wardrobe of the hotel room yesterday afternoon. He and Mrs. McCloskey did not miss the jewels until this morning.

SOME BLIGHTED AREAS IN COUNTY SUGGESTED AS INDUSTRY SITES

Baughman Stresses Imbalance Between Residential, Plant Areas, Urges Change for Tax Purposes.

Some of St. Louis county's substandard housing areas might well be redeveloped as industrial sites, M. Eugene Baughman, former county planning director, said today.

Baughman, who nearly a year ago recommended establishment of a land clearance for redevelopment authority to the County Council, said the need for one was "just as great today."

The county grand jury made a similar recommendation last week and Supervisor Luman P. Matthews directed preparation of a resolution for establishment of a redevelopment authority as an initial step toward rehabilitating the county's blighted areas.

Home-Industry Ratio Cited.
Baughman cited a report he made to the council last year in which he pointed out the present imbalance between residential and industrial-commercial land use in many county areas.

"St. Louis county has thousands of high-type homes, but lacks industrial activity which should be proportional to residential development if a proper tax base is to be available for school and other facilities," he said.

Some of the blighted areas are adjacent to good residential neighborhoods and, if redeveloped for commerce or light industry, could create a better balance of property values for tax purposes.

When no action was taken by the council on his proposal for a redevelopment authority similar to the one in St. Louis, Baughman said he dropped the project.

"We could not seek funds for further study and planning without council approval," he pointed out. "I had neither the staff nor money to carry out the necessary studies in blighted areas. All we could do were some preliminary, general surveys."

Speedy Action Urged.

He did not view the year's delay since his original proposal as serious, but urged speedy action now "to avoid loss of federal funds to other areas."

Additional endorsements of the proposal for a redevelopment authority were voiced by two officials of the Chicago regional office of the Public Housing Administration who inspected substandard housing in the county last Thursday.

Theodore A. Veenstra, PHA economist, said Meacham Park, Elmwood Park and Webster Heights "are ripe for private housing development to supplement public housing efforts."

P. J. Papadopoulos, chief of project planning in the Chicago office, said: "In all of these areas a redevelopment program would be a great aid in eliminating blight."

Martin Lammett III, chairman of the housing committee of the current grand jury, urged "exhaustive exploration" of the redevelopment proposal.

"By attracting private capital this plan would discourage public housing," he said.

Lammett said grand jurors were not aware of Baughman's 1955 recommendation when they made their similar proposal.

As long ago as 1953 Baughman and the County Planning Commission called attention to the evils of substandard housing areas. In a report titled "St. Louis County-owned Buildings and Properties," the commission recommended the problem be attacked by both public and private capital.

COMPLETE ATOM BAR IMPOSSIBLE, SPEAKER SAYS U.S. JURY MONDAY

U.S. Strategy Based on Nuclear Weapons, Principia Conference Is Told.

Because United States strategy is based upon nuclear weapons, negotiations to bar them completely are impossible for this country, Henry A. Kissinger, study director for nuclear weapons and foreign policy of the Council on Foreign Relations, said yesterday at Principia College, Elizabethtown.

Kissinger, a lecturer in government at Harvard University, said that it would be possible to negotiate "about limiting targets, but not weapons." He spoke at the eighteenth annual Public Affairs Conference at the college.

"We cannot negotiate about barring nuclear weapons," Kissinger said, "because our whole strategy is based on nuclear weapons. We must at least reserve the right to use them on the battlefield."

Soviet Military Tactics.

The whole Soviet military doctrine is based on massed manpower and massed artillery. On a modern battlefield with atomic weapons, everything is dispersed, and there is a premium on initiative at low levels—which gives us the advantage."

He added that the term "nuclear stalemate" is a misnomer because it applies only to all-out war.

"The real problem is who can put the other side in a position where they have to start an all-out war to extricate themselves," Kissinger said. "An all-out war should be avoided if possible, but we should get our capability for limited war strong enough so that we can use it to effect local transformations in our favor."

Edward Ames, associate professor of economics at Purdue University, urged caution in evaluating the apparent change in policy of the Soviet Union.

"Nobody should conclude that there is any change in Soviet policy for another two years," Ames, who served in the United States Embassy at Moscow from 1942 to 1945, declared.

"There is no way before that time that any one can possibly tell whether it is more than window dressing."

Linked With Power Element.

Brig. Gen. Charles H. Bonesteel III, presently attached to the office of the Secretary of Defense, pointed out that Communism is "inextricably linked" with the power element behind it.

"It is fundamental, in finally resolving the Communist threat without war, to keep the power and will and determination of the free world up," Gen. Bonesteel said. "Only thus will the Communists know that they can take over by force, that war won't pay."

The three-day conference is devoted to the topic: "A Problem in United States Foreign Policy: The U.S.S.R." It is conducted by the School of Government of the college. In attendance are 105 students and their faculty advisers, representing 23 colleges and universities.

In the depositions, defense counsel stressed the fact that Brown, who was executive assistant to the regional inspector of the Internal Revenue Service at Philadelphia in 1954, was directed by the Government to travel 1100 miles to Omaha without knowing why he had been sent. The physicians were asked if Brown might not be confused by this action and also by being "among strange people" at Omaha.

The answers were that the events outlined by counsel "would not be conducive to equanimity."

Maintained Clipping File.

Brown, testifying under cross-examination by J. Frank Cunningham, Justice Department attorney, admitted that he maintained a file of newspaper clippings relating to the Flanagan investigation which began in 1950. Cunningham was attempting to show that Brown was aware of what the Omaha grand jury was investigating.

Brown charged the Government had "confiscated" the clippings from his personal file.

He said he did not look at the clippings after receiving notice to go to Omaha.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

'Road-Weary, Exhausted'

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

We've just finished making out our federal income tax return and we have some suggestions for the Internal Revenue Bureau. We made a road map for our 1955 return, and it's the most involved route we've ever followed. It's as if we started out from St. Louis for Kirkwood and went by way of New York, Los Angeles and Miami, touching some cities two or three times along the way, and returning to St. Louis several times to get our bearings.

We started at the top of page one and got all the way down through line 5 without a detour. At line 6 we turned left to check "Instructions Page 5."

At line 7 we made a detour to an entirely different form, "separate schedule C," which turned out to be an extensive side trip.

At line 17, schedule C, we headed south for schedule C-1, then north to line 21, south again to C-2 and back north to line 23.

From there we went all the way back to form 1040, page one.

We made a similar side trip from page one, line 9, to schedule F, where we headed back and forth among other schedules, then back to line 10, page one. And so it went, line after line.

Our wife was hoarse from back-seat driving, and we lost one of the children along the way. We're not sure, but we believe he stopped off for a drink of water at line 2. We're not even going to try to find our way back to pick him up.

If someone in Washington runs across him, we'd appreciate his return, but we know Washington is a little slow about these things, so we won't expect to hear from him before he's married and filling out his own 1040.

Even with an income tax law as complicated as the one Congress has chosen to enact, there's no reason at all why the form cannot be rearranged so that the bewildered taxpayer starts at the top of page one, works to the bottom of it, then goes to page two and so on until it reaches the bottom of the last page, where he writes down the amount of his tax, signs the return, and begins to worry about how to pay the bill.

RICHARD M. WEISS.

Avoiding Responsibility?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

How can the President go off on a golf vacation in the face of the serious Arab-Israel situation when important decisions about war have to be made?

It would seem he is avoiding his responsibility when Secretary Dulles has to call a meeting of top Congress on this crisis, due to his absence from Washington.

If he has fully recovered from his heart attack, and able to do a "full time" job, why is a vacation necessary at this time? He spent 11 days in Augusta in January. G.L.F.

Bow to Vashon High

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I was much impressed with a recent letter from Frances Puetter regarding the courteous treatment she received from Vashon High students. It brought to mind something I have long observed in riding the Forest Park bus, on which many Vashon students ride: the dignified way in which they conduct themselves.

MRS. HENRY SPARRER.

As to State Withholding

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Your editorial, "A Better Way to Pay Taxes," prompts me to ask "for whom?"

It is true that having taxes withheld is an easier way to pay them. But—are the wage earners the only ones who are tax evaders? How about the many people who derive income from rents, mortgages, dividends and other sources? It is possible that this income is not always reported to the state.

I have always paid my taxes, even though I have and resent those who evade paying, for that makes the loss on the honest citizens that much greater. Withholding state income taxes will put a greater burden on the wage earner, unless the state can more properly check up on those who have income other than wages.

If the state should put through the withholding tax law, unless the standard 5 per cent for deductions is increased, there will be many requests for refunds. My deductions are always higher than the 5 per cent allowed on the short form. This will be true for many people, especially those who are buying homes, for they are allowed to deduct interest and real estate taxes paid.

Another thing that occurs to me is that employers will have additional bookkeeping and report-filing work and worries. Having done this work for a small company, I know how much of it there is now with federal income tax withholding, social security, city earnings tax, and so on. Now an added burden will be entailed to keep the state income tax withholding records.

To Unify a Party

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I agree with Reader Marian Barnholz and the other distinguished St. Louisans whose letter of endorsement of Gov. Stevenson appeared recently in the Post-Dispatch.

In my opinion Gov. Stevenson is the only Democrat with an outside chance of victory in November, not only because he is one of the most outstanding men of our times but also because he represents a unifying force to a badly divided party.

E. L. JOHNSON,

To Net Tax Dodgers

Everybody who pays a state income tax—and today, incidentally, is the deadline for 1955 payments—will be gratified to know that collections have gone up sharply this year.

Partly the increase is due to high employment, but much of it clearly traces to tighter enforcement. The last session of the General Assembly authorized the Department of Revenue to photocopy federal income tax returns filed in Missouri for comparison with the same persons' state returns. The very fact that this check was being made undoubtedly induced a considerable number of persons to file returns which otherwise would not have come in.

For the last fiscal year, ending June 30, 1955, income tax collections totaled a record $27,300,000, an increase of $1,200,000 over the previous year. There is little doubt that the current fiscal year will show another, perhaps a larger, increase.

Yet state tax officials believe that income tax evasion still is widespread. Supervisor Thomas R. Allen estimated recently that 10,000 Illinois residents who earned wages in St. Louis ducked their tax liability last year. The same thing is true of many Kansans who work in Kansas City.

Two years ago Mr. Allen estimated that 100,000 persons were failing to file state tax returns. That amounted to one dodger for every six payers. How many have been brought into the fold by the current enforcement drive is uncertain, but it can be predicted with perfect safety that if the Legislature ever reduces enforcement funds and the collection policy loosens up, tax dodging will again start rising.

The most effective way to collect the state income tax and minimize evasion is by withholding at the source, just as the federal government does. The time has come for Missouri to consider it. Iowa is doing so, and we print under the cartoon today an editorial from the Des Moines Register discussing the question. Eleven states have already adopted withholding. In Arizona, the plan is reported to have increased collections by 25 per cent.

A collection system that might increase the yield of the tax by $5,000,000 a year or more is not to be brushed off, especially at a time when state needs are going up all along the line. But whatever the yield, withholding commands itself by its equity as well. Nothing arouses the righteous wrath of taxpayers so much as knowledge that others are escaping the obligation which they are carrying.

Missouri taxpayers would not, of course, take kindly to the idea of income taxes being deducted from their pay checks and then deposited by the state in interest-free accounts for the use and profit of banks. This is one more reason for prompt action to enable the state, rather than the banks, to earn interest on its own funds.

The combination of collecting interest on its idle funds and collecting by payroll deduction the full amount due in income taxes could make a great difference in the state's finances. Once the interest problem is out of the way, development of a sound withholding plan should be the next order of business.

Why Not 'Yield' for 'Stop'?

St. Louis has something approaching a national reputation as a city of stop signs and as the home of the rolling stop. More than half of its nearly 7000 street intersections bear two or four-way stop signs. While many are essential, others have no valid reason for being.

How many stop signs originate from an actual traffic study and how many from something like an alderman's desire to favor a constituent who just feels his corner must have a stop sign?

Mayor Tucker last week vetoed bills for eight new stops and approved seven others. So the city acquired seven more stop signs.

In some counties, cities and towns the intersections where traffic is light are marked on two opposite sides by signs reading "Yield Right of Way." If two vehicles collide at one of these intersections, the driver who passed the "Yield" sign is almost automatically assumed to have been at fault.

"Yield" tells one driver what to do. It makes clear he is not merely to stop and then plow on in an assertion of his "rights." "Yield" also means much more than "Dangerous Intersection," a trite warning that probably could be applied to every intersection.

What is so rare as a day in the middle of the year—the farmer sows and the tax collector harvests.

necessity. When is Congress going to get down to this core of the matter, instead of banging about noiselessly at the periphery?

Adenauer Yields to Pressure

The announcement that the West German Federal Republic will directly approach Moscow regarding reunification with East Germany is an obvious concession to the opponents of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer. Such an approach to Russia by a now virtually sovereign West Germany loomed as an eventual inevitability if reunification were not achieved by the occupation powers. Coming at this time, it is a conciliatory gesture to the Socialist opposition which has announced its disapproval of the conscription bill about to be brought up in the Bundestag.

The Socialists never have been out-and-out opponents of rearmament, but they have regarded it as an obstacle to reunification. Their argument has been that the latter should come first, and that it must come reasonably soon lest the youth of East Germany be Communized in the meantime and so become a serious political problem for the reunited nation. They now have the backing of such groups as the Free Democrats which withdrew from the Adenauer coalition largely on this issue. They also have the quiet support of industrialists who fear West Germany's current boom would be deflated by a worsening of the manpower shortage and by diversion of such materials as steel from plant construction and the export market to military uses.

Dr. Adenauer's decline in political strength also is a cause for concern. His coalition now is composed only of the Christian Democrats and the small German party. Worse still, the Bavarian Christian Democrats—who consider themselves an independent group under the name of the Christian Social Union—have lost control of the Land government in Munich and are wondering whether a too ardent support of Dr. Adenauer might not be an obstacle to their reelections to power.

There could be a further splintering of Dr. Adenauer's support as Germans think more and more about next year's national elections. Hence the concession on reunification in order to push through the conscription bill now instead of letting it become a national campaign issue. The NATO powers, however, must feel that Dr. Adenauer may be offering a rather high price for an uncertain result.

Fortunately he is scheduled to discuss his problems with the British and French foreign ministers and then will take them up with President Eisenhower in Washington in June. This will give the Western Big Three an opportunity to remind Dr. Adenauer of the advantage of Bonn's present solidly pro-Western policy and the risks involved in weakening it.

Even Slums Can Be New

St. Louis County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews has endorsed the idea of a county redevelopment authority. Perhaps some county residents, living in comfortable suburban homes, will wonder why a county so newly developed should already need redevelopment. Yet it is a fact.

If the county had not grown so fast, or if it had grown in a more orderly and planned manner, or if it had restricted Jerry-built housing and unnecessary crowding in its broad prairies at any time, redevelopment would not be necessary. But it is. Health authorities only last week reported on health hazards in 11 substandard areas. The county has its slums.

The County Planning Commission first recommended a land clearance for redevelopment authority a year ago, but the County Council took no action. On Wednesday the county grand jury revived the proposal, and Mr. Matthews promises to explore the legal questions involved. If the county would also study the redevelopment record of the neighboring city, it would find encouragement for its task.

It is a shame that a county so new to urban life would so soon face blight. The lesson is plain that the county and its communities need to stress better zoning to prevent the growth of any more potential slums. But the best way to face the fact that blight already exists is to establish a redevelopment agency.

Another objection to the withholding plan is that it causes some additional work and expense to the employer. But this does not seem a serious objection in view of what the employer has to do for the federal government anyway. It would be necessary, of course, to provide penalties for employers who neglected to withhold the taxes.

Another objection to the withholding plan is that the individual must pay his taxes earlier. He might prefer to use that money himself for a year—maybe buying something on the installment plan. But the convenience of the withholding method of payment offsets this disadvantage to most taxpayers.

Withholding would result in the tax plan that the state consider using the withholding plan for state income taxes.

The commission's timing on this suggestion is excellent. Who doesn't wish that at this time of year that his state income tax had been paid? The taxpayer is likely to be much more upset—emotionally and financially—about a $100 state income tax than a $600 federal income tax. That's because the federal tax has been paid by deductions from his paycheck.

EDUCATORS DISCUSS BARBERSHOP MUSIC

Demonstrations Given—National Conference in Its Second Day.

Barbershop style harmony and how it can be made a part of the regular school music program was discussed today at a special session of the fiftieth anniversary convention of the Music Educators National Conference in Kiel Auditorium.

John Z. Means, chairman of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America, was principal speaker at the meeting.

The six-day convention of the conference formally opened yesterday with a general session, clinics and workshops for musical groups of all levels.

Music and demonstrations of barbershop singing were presented by the Rock Island (Ill.) High School Barbershop Chorus and Quarts with Robert L. Maurus conducting, and the Schmidt Brothers, past international champions.

Today's sessions also were to include performances by the Missouri All-State High School Orchestra; marching demonstrations by the Lincoln High School band of Vincennes, Ind., and the Ponca City (Okla.) High School band; Northside Junior High School, Elkhart, Ind.; the Raymond (Kan.) school string orchestra, Washington University chamber orchestra, the Boy Choristers of St. Louis elementary schools and St. Louis symphony woodwind quintet.

Charles A. Siepmann, professor of education and chairman of the department of communications of the New York University School of Education, addressed delegates on "The Cultural Crisis of Our Time" at a general session in the Opera House.

Robert Rimer, supervisor of instrumental music in Cleveland, O., discussed the program of chamber music for young people in his city at a workshop on "Literature and Interpretation of Music for Instrumental Ensembles." A trio from James Ford Rhodes High School in Cleveland performed a chamber music selection by Beethoven.

At the general session last night, the Wichita (Kan.) a cappella Choir and Orchestra presented a concert with the St. Charles a cappella Choir in the Opera House. Principal address, "Cultural Values in Education," was delivered by Howard E. Wilson, secretary of the educational policies commission of the National Education Association.

St. Louis elementary pupils and teachers were dismissed from classes yesterday to attend the "Music in Elementary Education" workshops. Sessions of yesterday's meeting ended with a lobby sing last night at Hotel Sheraton-Jefferson.

Bishop Holt to Give Lectures on Old Testament at Temple Israel.

By JOHN T. STEWART
Church Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Bishop Ivan Lee Holt of the Methodist Church is taking the place this year of a rabbinical scholar in the Institute of Judaism for Christian Clergy at Temple Israel, Kingshighway and Washington boulevards.

The nineteenth annual session of the institute will be held Tuesday, with sessions at 10:15 a.m., at noon, and at 1:30 p.m.

The institute this year honors Bishop Holt on the eve of his retirement, it was announced by the founder, Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman. Bishop Holt will retire at the end of June after his successor is elected at the Methodist Jurisdictional Conference in New Orleans, La., June 28. He was elected bishop in 1938, and has presided over the Missouri conferences of his church since 1944.

Bishop Holt is no stranger to Temple Israel; for 20 years (1918-38) he was pastor of St. John's Methodist Church, across the street from the temple. He founded Holy Cross Fellowship, which includes men's groups from St. John's Church, Temple Israel and Second Baptist Church.

Bishop Holt will give two lectures at the institute Tuesday:

10:15 a.m., "A Hebrew Prophet Faces a Problem of Our Day"; and at 1:30 p.m., "Evolution in the Old Testament Concept of God."

At the noon luncheon of the institute, tributes will be paid to the Methodist Bishop by representatives of the Jewish community, the Christian ministry, and business, civic and professional groups.

Ben Schulte Jr. is president of the Men's Club of Temple Israel, host to the institute and the Christian clergy.

ALL CHURCHES FACE PASTOR SHORTAGE

Catholic and Protestant Groups Need More Clergy for New Churches.

WASHINGTON, April 14 (UPI)—America's churches are suffering from a serious shortage of priests and preachers, a survey showed today.

Both in the Roman Catholic church and in major Protestant denominations, officials reported that the demand for clergymen far exceeds the supply.

The deficit of trained ministers has been growing steadily more acute for the last 10 years, under the impact of a nationwide boom in church membership.

Despite strenuous efforts to enlarge seminaries and to recruit more young men for ministerial careers, the situation seems likely to get worse before it gets better. The number of men graduating each year from seminaries is hardly sufficient to meet present replacement needs, let alone staff the thousands of new churches which will be built during the next few years to accommodate a continuing growth in membership.

According to the official Congregational body, the Catholic directory, Catholic membership in the United States increased nearly 36 per cent between 1945 and 1955. But the number of priests increased only 22 per cent. There was one priest for every 623 American Catholics in 1945. Today, the ratio is approximately one to 700.

The National Council of Churches says about 3500 men are called annually from all United States Protestant seminaries. A conservative estimate of the number required to serve the expanding churches is 10,000 a year.

The largest Protestant denomination, the Methodist church, alone needs at least 1200 new ministers a year to replace those who die or retire, plus another 1600 for church expansion.

The rapidly-growing Southern Baptist Convention, second largest Protestant denomination, reported that at any given time 2500 of its local churches are without pastors, and an additional 9000 have only part-time ministers.

In the Episcopal church, the shortage of clergymen for local pulpits has grown from 688 in 1952 to 806 this year. Other denominations told a similar story.

Blasingame May Force His Way Into Cards' Opening Lineup

Don Stars In Victory Over Sox

By Bob Broeg
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

KANSAS CITY, April 14 — Fred Hutchinson is expected to name the Cardinals' opening-day lineup by nightfall. And if Don Blasingame isn't in it, he'll soon be in there.

Unless the limb of prognostication can't hold 200 reportorial pounds or unless Blasingame eventually proves unable to stand up defensively as shortstop, the Blazer will force his way onto the varsity—even if Alex Grammas does start the season at short.

In mid-week, Hutchinson seemed to indicate a preference for Grammas's steadiness and experience, undeniable assets particularly when a thoughtful manager commented on the pressure of opening-day action and the disastrous result a bad start had been known to have on a kid's big league career.

But, as mentioned, if Hutch goes down with Grammas at the outset, it's silver dollars to suggest doughnuts that short of consistent team success or unexpected efforts by the Golden Greeks, he'll be forced—and apparently because he likes Blasingame's talents—to play the nimble newcomer.

Cut-Rate Version of Frisch.

The only thing slow about the 24-year-old Mississippian is his southern drawl. The Blazer—and that's what his manager and teammates call him—has inherited uniform number 2, which has been distinguished in Redbird ranks since Frank Frisch originated it some 23 years ago. And by pleasant coincidence, Blasingame is a colorful cut-rate version of the famed Fordham Flash.

Even while hitting only .239 this spring, the Dixie Dandy has demonstrated gameness and refusal to give ground against sidearming southpaws. And the left-handed-hitting, base-stealing swiftie has shown skill as a walk-and-wheeling leadoff man with additional ability to punch the ball to left field, drag bunt and pull with enough power to reach the right field screen at Busch Stadium.

Blasingame has had a hitting background of .290 in Class B, .315 in a Double-A and .302 in Triple-A. He's no Frisch, but he is more talented than Eddie Stanky or Solly Hemus, two little men who made a little go a long way because of the same fire and spirit—and without the same speed—or the 5 ft. 9 in., 160-pound Blazer.

Back at Omaha, where he starred as the American Association's rookie-of-the-year last season, Blasingame contributed handsomely yesterday to a wrap-up victory over the Chicago White Sox, whom the Cardinals must own lock, stock and barrel Park by taking seven of eight games. The 14-11 finish straight, the wind-up was another come-from-behind triumph for the sizzling St. Louis Nationals, 7 to 5.

Scores Three Runs.

Playing second base, as Red Schoendienst rested, Blasingame scored three times, walked twice and furnished all a single in the decisive eighth inning, a frame which Hal Smith opened with a surprising homer and Rip Repulski climaxed with a tie-breaking two-run ground-rule double off Joe Dahlke, Chicago reliever, who had been rushed into service in the seventh.

In succession the Blazer's long leads off first base drove three Chicago pitchers—Sandy Consuegra, Harry Byrd and Dahlke—to the same distraction Marty Marion must have felt after the ninth Chi-sox defeat in the last 10 games. What the Cardinals did to the Pale Hose in the Pullman League shouldn't be forgotten as a nice guy like Marty, who finally blew his sandy top.

In an effort to snap the Chi-sox slump, Marion didn't even bring his ball club to the park until almost game time, skipping hitting practice. But the only thing that snapped was his own temper when soft-spoken Sherri Lollar, who almost won the contest later with a three-run homer off Stu Miller, jawed at plate Umpire Frank Secory on a fourth ball in the third inning.

Marian, joining to make it a duet, drew a beave-her from the arbiter. The same frame when Umpire Vic Delmore ruled that Luis Aparicio hadn't held a throw long enough for a force-out second, the White Sox kicked up such a long and vehement storm that red-faced Bill Summers, dean of active American League umpires, thumbed out starting pitcher Consuegra and Coach Don Gutierrez.

And so at the final hour the White Sox found a department in which they could top Blazer Blasingame and the rest of the red-hot Cardinals—getting the most men banished.

Redbird Notes.

An 11,747 turnout at Omaha brought to $5,326 the total for six games of the unusual Western swing by the Florida-trained Redbirds and Chisox. The Cards now have won five straight, 17 of 20 and 21 of 30.

Harvey Haddix, opening-day pitching candidate, looked sharp in five innings in which he allowed five hits and one run, but did not walk a man. Old Folks Ellis Kinder closed the door in one-two-three order in the ninth after the Cards had rallied for the tenth time in exhibition action to win a game.

Monaco Roadblock

Limousine being driven by Prince Rainier is at a halt after photographers formed road-block in effort to get pictures of Rainier and his fiancee, Miss Grace Kelly, yesterday. Maneuver followed an earlier refusal by the prince to pose for pictures and turned into a boomerang on the photographers. Rainier became so angry he canceled previous arrangements and barred press photographers from his civil wedding ceremony next Wednesday.

CHANNELS HELD BY U.S. BARRED TO COMMERCIAL TV

Needed for National Security and for Aerial Navigation and Communications.

WASHINGTON, April 14—The Government refused yesterday to relinquish any of the broadcasting channels it holds to commercial television. It hinted that added channels may be needed for future defense needs.

The Office of Defense Mobilization reported that national security requirements and the needs of air navigation and air communications preclude the release of any of the very high frequencies now utilized in the radio spectrum by the Government.

The announcement included a statement by Deputy Secretary for Defense Reuben B. Robertson Jr., emphasizing the point that the military services are finding it difficult to meet all their requirements within the limited spectrum space now available to them.

"It is believed," Robertson said, "that this situation will become more critical as new technology now under development reaches the operational stage."

Study by Committee.

Arthur S. Flemming, head of ODM, said that a special inter-departmental committee had studied the problem of available channels since last November. The study, he said, was made at the request of the Federal Communications Commission, which has been pressed by commercial broadcasters for additional television channels.

In announcing the committee's conclusions, Flemming noted that the FCC had not suggested that the Government has spectrum space which it does not need, but was exploring all possible solutions to its problem of finding sufficient channels to meet the demands of commercial broadcasters.

The report said that in addition to national security requirements, the programs for guided missiles, radar networks, earth satellites and other defense necessities have already placed and will continue to place "an ever increasing demand for radio frequencies."

"Full national benefit," Flemming added, "could not be obtained from these vital services without the continued use of frequencies between 50 and 300 megacycles, the area where additional frequencies are now being sought by commercial and private interests."

In addition, the report noted that the world-wide build-up of United States international defense facilities in collaboration with friendly countries has intensified the reliance which must be placed for defense purposes on these frequencies.

More Space Needed.

The report emphasized that the operation of modern weapons systems has become increasingly dependent on a complex of communications and electronic devices requiring more and more space dispersed throughout the spectrum.

The announcement also said that this country could not, by itself, change frequencies used by most domestic and foreign shipping services and airlines since they are used under international agreement.

The Commerce Department, which was represented along with the Department of Defense and other interested agencies on the study committee, also insisted that existing channels held by the government are essential. It held that the continued use of VHF channels was necessary for the far-flung air navigation and air communications of this country, both domestic and world-wide, "contributes substantially to the national security and economy."

Neighbors of Burned-Out Family Give Cash, Clothes

Neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Locke, who were left homeless when flames gutted the four-room house in which they lived at 2033 Shirley Avenue, Bel-Ridge, last Sunday, have organized a drive in the Carsonville area to obtain clothing, furniture, a home and money for the Lockes and their six children.

Until a new home is found, three of the children are living with relatives, and the parents and other children are living in rented rooms.

Mrs. Edward Remmert, wife of the chief of the Carsonville volunteer fire department, said almost enough clothing has been collected to outfit the entire Locke family and donations are continuing to arrive at the fire station at 8740 Natural Bridge Road, Bel-Ridge. Cans for collection of cash donations have been placed at a number of business establishments in the neighborhood. Locke, a truck driver, has received a tentative offer of employment with a construction company, she said.

U.S. Installations in France.

PARIS, April 14 (AP)—The United States put up more than $59,000,000 worth of barracks, mess halls, hospitals, administration buildings and other military facilities in France in 1955. This half completes the United States Army and Air Force share of the 12 NATO bases in this country.

SITE FOR PERSHING MEMORIAL DRAWS HENNINGS PROTEST

Special to the Post-Dispatch
WASHINGTON, April 14—Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (Dem.), Missouri, today criticized the selection of Washington by the American Battle Monuments Commission as the site for a national memorial to Gen. John J. Pershing.

Hennings had urged that the memorial be erected in Laclede, Mo., where Pershing was born. Selection of a site in Washington was announced yesterday by the commission.

Hennings said that many years ago, when citizens of Laclede and organizations of the American Legion informed Pershing that they were naming a park there in his honor, Pershing replied that he regarded the site "as a scene of beauty."

Brig. Gen. Thama North, secretary of the Battle Monuments Commission, explained yesterday that Nebraskans also wanted the memorial erected at Lincoln, where Pershing had lived. North said it decided, since Pershing was a national figure it was preferable to erect the memorial here.

Pershing was commander of the American Expeditionary Forces in Europe in World War I.

CLARK C. WATERS FUNERAL TO BE MONDAY IN ELSBERRY

Funeral services for Clark C. Waters, vice president of Sparks-Waters Farmen, Inc., a grain company, will be at Elsberry, Mo., Monday afternoon. Burial will be in Elsberry.

Mr. Waters died yesterday at Missouri Baptist Hospital after a brief illness. He was 38 years old and lived at 750 University Avenue, University City. His office was in the Merchant's Exchange Building. Mr. Waters was a director of Merchant's Exchange, of which he had been a member since 1951.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lucille Waters; two daughters, Janice and Sarah Lynn Waters; and his mother, Mrs. Anna Waters, Elsberry.

Mrs. Catherine Van Zandt Dies. HOLLYWOOD, Fla., April 14 (AP)—Mrs. Catherine Smith Van Zandt, mother of Representative James E. Van Zandt (Rep.), Pennsylvania, died last night at the home of a daughter. She was 82 years old.

The report emphasized that the operation of modern weapons systems has become increasingly dependent on a complex of communications and electronic devices requiring more and more space dispersed throughout the spectrum.

The announcement also said that this country could not, by itself, change frequencies used by most domestic and foreign shipping services and airlines since they are used under international agreement.

Martha Carr's OPINION

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

Today's column is devoted to teen-agers who are invited to submit their problems to Martha Carr.

Dear Martha:

A FEW days ago I broke off with a guy because he was getting out of hand at times, but on the other hand he is pretty nice guy. When I told him about it he said, "Is that the way you want it?" I said, "Yes," then he just got up and walked away mad. I still like him and wonder what I could do. Please help me with your advice.

THANK YOU!

You're to be congratulated. If more girls would act as you have done, the boys would treat them with more respect. Better to lose him as a friend than to compromise your own standards of what is right and in good taste. The right kind of boy will respect you for taking a stand.

Dear Martha:
I AM A SENIOR in high school and have been going steady for several months. Soon I must go out of town for several days and during that time a dance is being held. It is formal, but not a big dance. Is it necessary for me to get her a date?

CURIOUS.

I think you and she should decide on that. If she has to attend the dance because she is an officer of the sponsoring group, then you should arrange an escort for her. But otherwise, your decision should depend on her wishes and the customs of your school. When a couple is actually engaged, the girl usually prefers to stay at home or to go to a movie with some of her friends rather than to have another escort if her fiance can't attend.

At the Movies

By Myles Standish

Nice Imagination

HERE have been so many outer space and flying saucer pictures made, and badly made, that you're probably fed up with them. But just as "Shane" showed there is a lot of wonder and glory left in the old trite Western plot, so does "FORBIDDEN PLANET" at LOEW'S STATE THEATER show that the outer space movie was just waiting to be done right.

This has been done expensively and lushly in CinemaScope, but, more important, it has been done with vaulting imagination both as to sets and to script. Cyril Hume's script doesn't make wonders out of an outer planet and a flying saucer. They are taken for granted. For, after all, this is 2200 A.D. and the age of the United Planets. A flying saucer space ship arrives on Altair-4, away out there, to check up on a party of scientists who landed there 20 years before and haven't been heard from. There they are greeted by a robot who talks like a perfect Jeeves in 187 languages, does butting, housework, chauffeuring, and turns out super-steel, or what do you require, in his spare time at night. Most outer-space stories would make a big thing out of this robot. Here he's merely Robby the Robot, a bit of comedy relief.

The sets are weird. Mountains make jagged pencilings in the sky against an arid plain. The saucer patrol finds there a bearded Dr. Morbius, who immediately, with wry humor, disclaims he is the mad scientist of popular space fiction. The crew, no matter what the century, is complaining about being on space patrol for a year, with no women or beer in sight, so there has to be sex appeal. Out comes Dr. Morbius' beautiful daughter, Altaira, in some fetchingly brief costumes, and an innocence of love which a couple of dashing officers are too eager to correct.

From there on, the melodrama burgeons with febrile imagination. This was the home of a super-race, a million years ahead of earth's inhabitants, who mysteriously were wiped out two thousand centuries ago, and Dr. Morbius has inherited all their vast lore. They were so civilized they abandoned lust and hate and war long before and became perfectly balanced beings. But there is a mysterious monster or monsters still lurking on the planet; this evil force destroyed the original race, and all but the professor and his family of the scientific party. As one comes to the flying saucer crew it is a huge, amorphous being, outlined only in fire, who refuses to succumb to atomic disintegrator rays, zap guns, or what have you handy. Guess what it turns out to be! It is the monster of the Id, the primeval and evil and uncontrollable subconscious of man, which is set loose and fed by self-replacing molecules which have been developed by the wizardry of the ancient scientists. I suppose there is a lesson here for all of us—what good to conquer space, if you can't conquer your id?

Anyway, it's grand entertainment, competently directed by Fred Wilcox and played with fervor by Walter Pidgeon as Dr. Morbius, Anne Francis as his daughter, and Leslie Nielsen, Warren Stevens and Jack Kelly as heads of the space patrol.

Just Sordid

I don't think we need to spend too much time on "TEMPEST IN THE FLESH," a French movie with English subtitles, at the SHADY OAK. It deals with the theme of nymphomania, and does it with a bad taste that obviously is directed at the box-office and not at compassion or better understanding by mankind. Francoise Arnoul as Clara, the girl who tries to end her promiscuity in marriage but finds her old compunctions still working, is all right. But the film succeeds only in achieving a certain sordidness which doesn't justify its being.

Social Problems

By Emily Post

MOTHER writes: "My 17-year-old daughter has been invited to a fraternity dance at a college in another city. She is very anxious to go but I am rather reluctant about letting her go. The reason is that I was brought up in the days when chaperons on occasions such as these were a must. The college is a big one and far away from here and she will have to go alone. Would it be proper for her to go by herself on the train and stay at the hotel or whatever place is provided by the boy? I would appreciate hearing from you on this matter."

There's no impropriety in your daughter accepting this type of invitation. Inviting girl friends to college dances has been an accepted custom for many years, and nowhere are the proprieties more strictly enforced than in men's colleges that invite young women guests, especially overnight visitors to the fraternity dances.

Bacon Appetizer Suggestions

By Edith M. Barber

BACON APPETIZERS CAN BE EASY AND IMAGINATIVE BY USING CHEESE WEDGES, OLIVES, MUSHROOMS OR FRUITS AS A CENTER, WRAPPED IN A BACON SLICE AND FASTENED WITH A TOOTHPICK.

STAY flat if you wish to have them that way. Some persons like to use the broiler for bacon. In this case the heat should be moderate and the broiling pan placed some distance from the heat.

OF COURSE, there are many special recipes that call for bacon in combination with other foods. Some of our favorites are for hot appetizers. A whole or a half slice may be wrapped around stuffed olives, small pickles or wedges of pineapple or cheese.

Certain main luncheon dishes also call for bacon. One of the favorites is broiled bananas. Another is a combination of frankfurters, cheese and bacon. An omelet garnished with bacon curds is particularly savory.

There are dozens of other suggestions that might be made.

the heart, ace and led dummy's heart four. West, winning with the heart king, could not put his partner in for spade lead and ruff, and so the American declarer got off with a one-trick score.

At the other table the American East opened a diamond to his partner's bid, and the play proceeded: West cashed two diamond tricks and shifted to the singleton spade, North went up with the spade ace and played two rounds of trumps, but the American West could and did get in the spade ruff. Upon winning with the heart king he returned to a low club, and when East forced dummy's ace, declarer could not get out of the dummy conveniently. A spade exit would give East two natural spade tricks; and on the actual club exit, East got in, cashed the spade king and led another spade which West ruffed.

The moral would seem to be that when the leader hasn't a really good card-combination of his own, his best course is to lead partner's bid suit. The king from K-Q-9-7 is not an ideal lead, by any means.

HYDE PARK, N.Y.—T HE news from the Middle East certainly is very comforting and I doubt whether our President's plea to Egypt and Israel will have a great deal of influence. But it is good to know that at last the Administration is stirred to some action concerning the Middle East.

Both Egypt and Israel have pledged the United Nations that they will take no warlike action, but it seems somewhat warlike when an Egyptian jet plane flies so far over the Negev desert that it is shot down on Israel's territory. Of course, one might say that it is normal to fly over a friendly area. But it certainly is not normal to fly over a country where the tension is as great as it is between Egypt and Israel and the result, almost inevitably, must be a battle.

I wish some of the present anxiety could have developed several years ago. I think we would have had more of a chance of real accomplishment. But now I have a dreadful feeling that very little will be done unless Dag Hammarskjold proves a miracle conciliator and finally finds the formula which can start negotiations.

by Great Britain and the United States on their positions certainly would help in this Middle East situation, and one can better hope that it will be forthcoming from both countries.

I think one of the most disturbing things that has happened in a long time is that curious episode of Anthony Eden's letter to the President which evidently was lost in the State Department.

I can remember a similar episode occurring once with my husband. It never occurred again!

I would think the President would make it completely clear that when a message is addressed to him by the Prime Minister of another country—or to the Secretary of State by the Prime Minister of another country—he wishes to see that message without delay.

Furnace Hint

Noises in a forced air furnace are often due to fan blades in the blower having been damaged. Sometimes the blower can be repaired and in other cases it must be replaced. Be sure that the power to the furnace is turned off before you start inspecting the blower.

Uncle Ray's Column

THREE questions about moons and planets appear in a letter from Mr. George B. Jewell, who writes:

"Why is it that the earth's moon does not rotate? Do you think that it will start to rotate eventually? How do planets give birth to moons?"

We always see the same side of the moon, but the moon does not rotate. It spins once in the same period that it makes a complete trip around the earth. That is why we never have seen the other side of the moon.

There is a widespread theory that the moons of our solar system were flung from the planets far back in time. It may send rockets, with automatic cameras around the moon, and these may bring back good pictures of the other side. Let us hope so, to satisfy the curiosity of the public.

The earth's moon turns around once in a bit more than four weeks. That is a rotation. During the same length of time it revolves around the earth. I doubt that the moon will gain speed in ages to come. More likely it will slow down a bit within the next few hundred million years.

Moons go around all the planets in the solar system except three—Mercury, Venus and Pluto. We are without record of anyone ever seeing the birth of a moon. The moons of various planets probably existed long before the first people inhabited the earth.

Nothing of that sort would seem possible after a planet became cold and solid. Scientists find it hard to believe that chunks would break off at any time except when a planet was hot and soft.
